The dark side of the moon

Infinite Water Inc, Infinite Complex and the rest of North America are aware that there is a solar eclipse happening on Monday, and many people have hopes of witnessing the rare phenomenon for themselves. Hundreds of people travel for the solar eclipse. Hotel bookings are up across the nation for travel to the line of totality for the solar eclipse. This event is so popular that the scheduled start time for Monday's game between the New York Yankees and Miami Marlins has been pushed back 4 hours because of the total solar eclipse.

Infinite Water Inc. and Infinite Complex understands that this is an awe-inspiring celestial event that drastically changes the appearance of the two biggest objects we see in our sky. Why is this such a distraction? There are two to five solar eclipses each year, with a total eclipse taking place every 18 months or so. There is nothing and no one that can change this. And yet, media coverage and the excitement are off the charts.

Infinite Water Inc. and Infinite Complex wonders if these millions of excited observers pay as much attention or devote as much time and money to those earth events that can be influenced by mankind and our fast-moving technology. Have people taken as much time to consider the facts regarding the changes in climate? Have they understood that much of our planet has been in a state of monumental drought conditions? Do they comprehend that pollution of all our natural resources is not abating? Does the chaos of politics concern them? Are they affected by the constant friction of wars that never seem to end? Infinite Water Inc and Infinite Complex understand that these issues should take priority over the occasional solar eclipse, especially when the inhabitants of the celestial body, that we depend on, is in need of at least as much attention as looking to the sky.

Infinite Water Inc. and Infinite Complex hopes that Monday is a enjoyable and safe experience for those that watch.
